LOIS.

THE PATHETIC STORY OF A LIFE OF SELF-SACRIFICE.

An old red farm-house, with its roof sloping toward the road, and rambling off at the back in an undecided way until stopped by the great barn, whose open doors showed full mows and made a dark setting for the vista of blue hills beyond. Along the side of the house were ranged squashes and pumpkins, absoring their last allowance of sunshine, and the wide south porch was hung with strings of peppers and braided ears of corn. The front door, with its fan light and iron knocker, opened on a narrow path leading down to the road between rows of prim China asters; but the iron knocker was apparently seldom raised, for the path was grass-grown, and an arm of the tall rose-bush had reached quite across the door-way.

South of the house the orchard stretched away, the pyramids of gathered fruit making vivid spots of yellow and red against the brown grass. Through the still air came now and then the mellow thud of a falling apple or the sound of distant chopping, and over all lay the soft haze of an October day darkened here and there by the smoke of a brush fire. The house faced the west, and just now all its little old-fashioned panes were winking and blinking at the setting sun as though there was a good understanding between them. The place seemed the very heart of content; but down where the orchard sloped to the road a sorrowful little drama was being enacted. It was a common one—merely the parting of two young hearts—something we smile over every day, thinking how soon it will be outlived; and the actors were no tragedy king and queen, only a little New England girl of sixty years ago and her farmer-lover.

There had been tears and vehement pleadings, but they were over now, and the two stood gravely regarding each other across the old rail fence. The girl's clasped hands rested on the fence and young man covered them with his strong brown hands and made a final appeal.

"Lois, think what you have chosen; think what it will be to be shut up there with your grandmother."

"I know what it will be better than you can tell me; but that doesn't alter my duty," answered the girl steadily.

"But is it your duty?" urged the young, eager voice. "Your father is well able to hire a housekeeper to look after things and take care of your grandmother. There's Sam Johnson's widow, she'd jump at the chance of such a home."

A wan little smile glanced over the girl's face. "How long do you think grandma and 'Viry Johnson would agree?" she asked.

"Well, then, could'nt grandma go to your uncle 'Bijah's?"

"No, David," was the answer. "You know she tried that once and couldn't stand the children; besides she was born in the old house and says she shall die there. It's no use talking; nobody except father and me will bear with her, and we must look after her as long as she lives."

"And the Dunns live to be ninety," said the young man.

Her face paled a little, but she said: "Yes," quietly.

"O, Lois," he burst forth, "don't do it! It will be a living death. Come with me. Now that I have this splendid chance, I want you to share my success, for I know I shall succeed."

"I'm sure of it," said the girl, with simple faith looking up to the sunburned face with loving eyes.

Those sweet eyes! As he looked down at them and thought how soon he should be beyond their light, he leaped the fence, and, throwing his arms about her, drew her closely to him.

But even the sweet sorrow of parting was to be shortened, for while the girl clung to him there came a shrill call of "Lois! Lois!" followed by a weak, impatient blast on the dinner-horn.

With a few hasty words of farewell, she broke from his detaining hold and ran swiftly through the orchard. When she reached the great flat door-stone, she stood a moment with her hand on the latch and looked back Up the road went a solitary figure. How far he had gone already! The sun was down, the fields looked gray and bare, there was a chill in the air, and as she shut the door behind her she seemed to shut out forever youth and hope and love.

Grandma Dunn was in one of her worst moods. "Where ye been, Lois?" was the sharp inquiry.

"Down in the orchard," answered Lois, holding out her hands to the blaze in the fire-place, for the chill seemed to have crept to her heart.

"Was ye alone? I thought once or twice I heard voices." And the old woman looked suspiciously at her.

"David Price was there," said the girl, quietly.

"David Price was there, was he?" echoed the shrill voice. "Well, if David Price wants to see ye he'd better come to yer father's house. In my day young men didn't expect gells to go philanderin' 'cross lots to meet 'em; and I shall tell him so the next time he comes here."

"He won't come again," Lois answered (oh, with what a heavy heart!) "He's going away."

"Where's he goin' now?" demanded Grandma Dunn, as though the young man's life had been one round of travel, whereas he had never been forty miles from his native town.

"Out to his Uncle Micah's in Ohio. His uncle is going to take him into business," answered Lois.

"Hum!" said grandma Dunn: "'a rollin' stun gethers no moss.'" Then with a thought of her own comfort: "Are ye ever goin' to set the table? I'm jest a famishin' for my supper."

Joshua Dunn, coming in just then, looked from his mother to his daughter and said, in his grave way: "Seems to me, Lois, you might look after your grandmother a little closer."

Poor Lois! She had the feelings, so common to all of us, that the conscious acceptance of a burden must somehow lighten it, and the secret self-sacrifice must in some mysterious way be felt and appreciated; but here in the first hour of her cross-bearing had come not praise, but blame.

She made no answer; her face flushed, then paled, and with close-shut lips she walked quickly from the room.

"Joshuay," quavered Grandma Dunn, "ye ought to take that gell in hand. She's gettin' more high-headed ev'ry day. She's goin' to be the very pattern of her mother."

"There, there, 'mother!" answered the farmer. "Let the girl alone. She's well enough; and the more she grows like her mother the better it'll please me." For Joshua Dunn held in very tender remembrance the young wife who had given her life for her baby's.

Lois did not come down to supper, but when her father brought in the milk she came and took care of it in her deft, quiet way.

He stood and watched her, his one ewe-lamb, his motherless child. How dear she was to him, from her shining brown head to her willing feet! He was a man of few caresses, but by and by he went over to her and laid his rough hand gently on her head, and said: "Father's good little girl." Then, as though frightened at this unwonted exhibition of affection, he gathered the milk-pails together and hurried out.

The touch and the words eased the heart-ache a little, but that night, lying with wide wakeful eyes fixed on the square of moonlight on the floor, Lois said over and over, "The Dunns live to be ninety," "The Dunns live to be ninety." And she was only twenty. How could she bear this for seventy years?

But nature is kind to the young, and Lois had forgotten her trouble long before another pair of eyes closed in the old farm house.

Joshua Dunn pondered long and sorrowfully. He had not been father and mother both for twenty years without having his preceptions sharpened where his child was concerned, and remembering David Price's frequent visits, and certain loiterings in the old porch, and sundry tender glances, it was not difficult to connect Lois' sober face with the young man's going away. In his inmost heart he was thankful that he was not called upon to give her up; but something must be done to cheer her. If only her mother were alive! But he must do his best alone.

She should have some new dresses; she must have young company; he would take her up to the village oftener. But alas for the tender planning! The next time Joshua Dunn went to the village he was carried there and laid beside his young wife.

It had happened very suddenly. He had gone out to the barn in the morning, and, not coming in to breakfast, Lois had gone in search of him, and found him lying under the feet of a horse he had lately bought, the good, kind face trampled out of recognition.

Well, we can live through a great deal, and after the first bewilderment was over Lois took up her old duties again.

Joshua Dunn had been a well-to-do man, and everything was left to Lois. There was to be no anxiety about ways and means; there was nothing to do, except to live, with all the brightness of life gone. Grandma Dunn, in the face of a real sorrow, stopped fretting for awhile, and Lois had a faint hope that their mutual loss might bring them nearer together; but after a few weeks things fell back in their old courses, her grandmother repining and upbraiding, and Lois caring for her in a cold, mechanical way.

Then the keen New England conscience awoke. Was this the spirit of self-sacrifice? Had she given up her love merely to do the work a hired servant might do, and with the same feelings? Was she not cheapening her sacrifice by withholding a part of the price?

So the lonely girl goaded herself until by prayers and tears she grew into a softer frame of mind, and the silent indifference with which she had borne her grandmother's sharp speeches changed to pity for the poor cross-grained nature. If Grandma Dunn noticed the change she gave no sign; but it made life more tolerable to Lois. At the best time dragged very slowly at the old farm-house. The mornings were bearable, for the care of the house kept her busy; but in the long summer afternoons, when her grandmother dozed in her chair, and in the long winter evenings, when she sat alone by the fire, she grew to have the feeling that they had lived in the same way for a hundred years, and would live on and on indefinitely.

But after ten years had worn away a new interest came into her life. One day a paper from Boston strayed up to the red house on the hill. Lois did not know that the paper held a high rank in the literature of the day, but she felt the difference between it and their county weekly. One little story pleased her especially. It did not abound in elopements, murders and highly-wrought situations, like the weekly stories, but ran along as naturally as one friend might talk to another, and the thought came to her, why couldn't she write a story?

So one afternoon, when Grandma Dunn was safely off in her nap, Lois sat down in the shady porch and wrote her first story. It was only the story of a life which had been lived in her own village. There was no attempt at fine writing, no romance, no tragedy—unless the story of a broken heart is always a tragedy—but the story was told so simply and tenderly that it seemed like a quiet brook running at twilight between banks of fern and alder, until it is lost in shadow.

With many misgivings she sent it to the Boston paper, and the editor, a man of quiet tastes, read it himself, then took it home and read it to his invalid wife; and the result was that in a few weeks Lois received a paper addressed in a strange handwriting, and in it her little story; and not only that, but a letter came containing a check and a few words of praise. With a heart lighter than it had been since her father's death, she took the paper and letter to her room. She turned the check over and over—her own money, the first she had ever earned, and earned in such a delightful way! Then she read and re-read her story, and wondered how it sounded to others. She looked the paper over to compare it with other stories, and a familiar name caught her eye, and there, among the marriage notices, she read this: "In this city, on the 10th inst., by Rev. Daniel Simpson, Mary, only daughter of Roger Leonard, of this city, to David Price, of Cleveland, Ohio.

She held the paper a few minutes, then folded it smoothly and laid it away. Her brief sunshine had clouded over.

After awhile, urged by her loneliness, she took up her pen again; and in all the years that followed she found it a refuge and comfort, not only to herself, but to others; for her writings, though often crude, had a simplicity and naturalness which touched other hearts; and besides the modest money return there came to her once in awhile a letter from some stranger with words of kindly appreciation.

One day, when her grandmother was unusually restless, Lois, to entertain her, brought down her first story and read it to her. Grandma Dunn had often listened to her stories without suspecting the author, and her blunt criticisms were amusing and sometimes helpful. "Hum!" she said, at the end of this one; "that woman had sorter the same life as M'lissy Peters—she that was a Shepley; only nobody would think of puttin' M'lissy in a story—a poor, shif'less thing. If she'd 'a' had less book-larnin' and more common sense, Job Peters's folks would 'a' liked her a deal better, and she wouldn't 'a' been badgered to death by 'em." Then, with sudden irrelevancy: "Ye ought to hev married, Lois. There ought to be children about the house. Ye'd 'a' done better to hev taken that David Price that used to hang round here. Somebody was a-tellin' of me the other day that he was reel forehanded out to Ohio. But gells never know what's best for 'em." And she went off into an inarticulate muttering.

For a moment Lois felt a wild impulse to tell her grandmother why she had not married David Price, to lay open before her the long years of loneliness, the starvation of heart, which had been endured for her sake; but the lifelong habit of reticence was not easily broken, and the words died away without utterance.

Afterward she was glad of this silence—for that night the querulous voice stopped suddenly, and the chain that had bound Lois for twenty years was broken. She was free. But what was freedom worth to her? The "zest was gone out of life; she had grown away from her old friend and made no new ones; there was no tie to bind her to Hillsborough, and she felt the full extent of her loneliness when she realized the fact that she had no ties in any place in the wide world. But she could not stay in her old home; so after awhile she sold the farm and moved away to a small town near Boston, guided in her choice only by the fact that from this town had come some of the friendly stranger letters. Here she settled herself in a comfortable home, and faced resolutely the thirty or forty years which in all human probability lay before her. The people about her proved kindly and intelligent; she found more congenial society than she had ever known before; her pleasant house became a center of quiet sociability, and she enjoyed a kind of autumnal happiness.

One afternoon, some eight years after her coming to Springvale, Miss Lois, sitting in her chamber, writing, heard the gate creak, and looking out, saw a peddler coming up the walk. He walked feebly, and she noticed that as he neared the steps he straightened himself with an effort. Her little maid was out, so she laid down her pen and went down to him.

The man stood looking through the open door into the wide old-fashioned hall. It looked very cool and inviting after his hot tramp, and Miss Lois, coming down the stairs, fair and sweet in her soft gray dress and lavender ribbons, seemed a part of the peace and quiet of the house.

She saw that he looked hot and tired, and asked him in, setting the large hall-chair for him. He dropped into it wearily, and opening his stock without the volubility common to his kind. It consisted of the usual small wares, and Miss Lois made her selection of pins, needles and tape with the careful deliberation of a New England housekeeper.

Suddenly she turned very white, and laid her hand on the stair-rail as though for support. It was over in a moment; and when the peddler looked at her again she wore her usual calm face, though the hands counting the money trembled a little. As he was gathering his wares together she asked him, "Have you been long at this business?"

"No, ma'am," he answered, rising stiffly; "only a year or two. I used to do a good business in Cleveland, Ohio, and had a house as pleasant as this, and a wife and a child; but I failed in business; then my wife and child died, and I had a long sickness. After I got up from it I tried several different things, but finally came to this. Thank you, ma'am," putting the money in his thin pocket-book. "You look like somebody I used to know in Hillsborough, where I was raised."

But Miss Lois made no answer, except "Good afternoon," as he went down the steps.

When the gate closed behind him, she went up to her chamber, unlocked a drawer in her bureau, and taking from it a thin package of letters, sat down with them in her hand.

There was no need to read them; she knew every word in them. They had come at long intervals during the first nine years of waiting; she could tell the very day the last one came. She sat there very quietly until her little maid called her to tea; then she put the letters back in their place smoothed her hair, and went down. And neither Polly nor the friends who came in the evening suspected that Miss Lois had seen a ghost that afternoon.

The next morning Polly returned from the grocery in great excitement. A peddler had a bleeding-spell there the night before; they had made him a bed in the back room, and that afternoon the select men were going to take him to the poor house. Polly had seen with her open eyes.

Miss Lois fihished pasting the paper over the last tumbler of current jelly, then washed her hands calmly, took off her apron, and went up-stairs. In a few minutes she came down with her hat on. "I'm going out for a little while, Polly," she said; "and while I'm gone you may make up the bed in the east chamber."

Polly was amazed. Of course nobody in the town would come to stay all night; and Miss Lois had had no letters for a few days; besides, there had been no extra cooking. What could it mean? But, being an obedient little maid, she did as she was bid. Bed-making was an extra science with Polly, who had been carefully trained in it by Miss Lois; so the feather-bed was rolled and thumped until it stood up a great fluffy mounted to be laboriously and critically leveled with the broom-handle, Polly's arms being far too short for the purpose. Then the lavender-scented sheets were carefully laid on, with due regard to wide hem and narrow hem, the home-spun blanket, with its herring-bone border, was spread without a wrinkle and tucked under the smoothly-rounded edges, and over all went the big white counterpane. It was a sight to do your eyes good. Polly was standing with the end of a pillow between her teeth, her head very far back, trying to slip the pillow case on, when there was a sound of wheels at the door. Without letting go the pillow she managed to apply one eye to the shutter. It was the public carriage, and, wonder of wonders, the doctor got out, then Miss Lois, and, with the help of the driver, a man was taken out and caried up the walk.

But other eyes than Polly's had been busy and within forty-eight hours everybody in Springvale knew that Miss Lois had recognized an old friend in the peddler and had taken him home to nurse. And I think that it is to the credit of human nature that, while a few said: "Did you ever?" and "How it looks?" the majority approved of the act and only hoped Miss Lois wouldn't get sick herself.

But Miss Lois' kindness was not to be taxed long. The man failed rapidly, and another hemmorrhage made the end certain. He was delirious most of the time, and talked much of "Mary" and "Willie" and names strange to Miss Lois; but as the end drew near he ceased muttering, and lay apparently unconscious. That night, as she sat beside him, he looked up suddenly, his eyes bright and clear.

"Why, Lois!" he said.

He made an effort to speak, his eyelids quivered, a breath—and a second time he had gone on a long journey, leaving her behind him.

When the town authorities came to make arrangements for the funeral, Miss Lois asked that he be buried in her own lot, for in the months of her homesickness she had had the remains of her father and mother brought from their bleak hillside graves to rest near her. So he was laid besides his old townsman, and a few months after a plain marble slab was placed at his head, bearing only the name "David Price," with the date of death, and his age, "52 years."

When Miss Lois wore the gray dress again Polly noticed that the lavender ribbons were gone, and about this time people said to each other that Miss Lois was beginning to show her age. Not that she grew gray and wrinkled suddenly; but there was a change. It was not her heart that was changed, for her friends found her more and more delightful, and her house was the favorite stopping-place for young and old. She seemed to have a special tenderness for young girls, and many confidences, blushing or tearful were poured into the sympathetic ear, and many were the lovers' quarrels healed by her gentle counsels. She used to say sometimes in a wistful way: "I want them to have all the happiness I have missed." But her sympathies were not confined to the young; they overflowed on all who needed them. Discouraged men and women slouched into her gate at nightfall, and came out with their faces lifted and fresh hope in their hearts. Naughty boys, who deserved and dreaded the rod, knocked meekly at her back door for help, which was always given, given, mingled with such wholesome reproof that a boy seldom came twice on the same errand. Even hurt and homeless animals seemed to know by instinct where to find an asylum, and took the shortest route to Miss Lois' door, and not one was turned away unhelped.

So the peaceful years slipped away, until one day her friends gathered to keep her eightieth birthday; and they said, to each other how well Miss Lois was looking, and that they hoped to keep her for another ten years; and the house was gay with flowers and little children, and Miss Lois beamed on them until her face seemed transfigured.

That night, as Polly, now grown staid and eldery, went up to her room, she stopped to see if her mistress was comfortable for the night. She found her sitting in her great arm-chair, her head resting lightly against the cushions, and her eyes closed as though in quiet sleep. But it was the long sleep. One hand rested upon a package of yellow letters, and the thin forefinger of the other had stopped at a verse in the open Bible in her lay; and when they raised the stiffening hands they read the words: 'Even Christ pleased not Himself.'

Old and faithful friends gathered up her treasures, and when in looking over her papers they came to the package of yellow letters and read the signatures, they suddenly remembered the name on the stone in the graveyard, and looked at each other with pitying eyes, half guessing the story; but the story was ended.

'I am surprised, John,' said the old lady when she found the butler helping himself to some of the finest old port. 'So am I, ma'am, I thought you had gone out,' was the reply.

G W RUMBERGER, Secretary. R M MAGEE, Chairman.

WASHINGTON reports without an exception show that Cleveland and his Cabinet are perfectly agreed upon the Civil service question. They are determined to put a damper on the hungry crowd of officehunters by calling the attention of the spoilsmen to the civil service law and by introducing firm and decisive rules regulating written applications for government positions. Besides that, Cleveland's reform in the closer official circle of the White House has a chilling effect on the plunder crowd. He made a beginning by reducing his own personnel by four employes and notified his private secretary, Mr. Lamont, that he must try and get along with this reduced force. This proves that the new president commences the reform work at the right place—at home—and if he continues to clean out at this rate the superfluous and worthless element in other departments, we can expect an economical and orderly administration before long.

VERY few Democrats may be acquainted with the fact that ex-senator Bayard, the new secretary of state in President Cleveland's cabinet is the descendant of one of the most celebrated families of the French nobility. Thomas Francis Bayard's forefathers were a mighty set of knights in the province of Dauphine, at present the Isere Department in southeastern France and the ruins of castle Bayard can be found to this day on the peak of a mountain proudly overlooking the neighboring country. Several members of his family first immigrated in America in 1647 landing at New York, called New Amsterdam in those days.

THE appointment of General Black, of Illinois, as pension commissioner at Washington, is the first commendable move of the new secretary of interior affairs, Mr. Lamar. Black was a brave Union soldier in the late war and the veterans of the country can rest assured that the pension office will be conscientously filled and that he will make it hot for pension frauds.

THE railroad strikers on Jay Gould's Wabash and Missouri-Pacific lines in the southwestern part of the United States, after a determined but orderly strike won the day at last The railroad companies more than yielded to their demand by restoring the wages to the rates given before the September cut. All hands are now at work again.

EUROPEAN war talk is on the decline. Cruel America was almost ready to laugh in its own sleeve over the prospects of opening foreign markets in case of war across the sea. Always taking care of No. 1.

IT IS said that W. U. Hensel, of Lancaster, chairman of the democratic state committee of Pennsylvania is slated for the office of marshall for the district of Columbia.

—SAYS neighbor Smith, "My little girl was pale and sickly, rapidly losing flesh, appetite variable, and sleep much disturbed. Her condition was becoming alarming. Was advised by a friend to try McDonald's Celebrated Worm Powders. Administered three and she expelled the enormous number of 132 worms. Neighbor Smith now thinks McDonald's Worm Powders are the greatest vermifuge in existence.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 16, 1885.

It is said that the President has avowed a determination to adhere not only to the letter but to the spirit of the civil service reform law, and that all appointments to office hereafter to be made by this administration shall be in accordance with civil service requirements. There is, however, a very grave danger that the thimble-rigging Republican politicians who have thus far evaded the enforcement of the law in the retention of an army of incompetents in every department of the government, will find it not at all difficult to produce reasons enough to prevent any considerable number of changes for the coming four years of Democratic management. What I want to see, and what the country expects to see, is a thorough renovation in the government's offices everywhere, and the administration of its affairs placed in the hands of those to whom the people look for the fulfillment of our repeated pledges for retrenchment and reform.

Among the first things that President Cleveland should see to is the introducing of some of the customs and habits of American civilization in the State Department, which under the snobbish Frelinghuysen has become a nest of foreign lackeys and gilt-edge flummery. The idea that anybody is important enough to make it absolutely essential that he should be retained in office, should now be effectually exploded. If through the opportune visitation of a pestilence, the last one of these State Department clerks should be called hence, I will wager a horse that somebody or other will be found to fill their places, and fill them acceptably too. Old John Davis has survived and peregrinated through every administration for half a century as Assistant Secretary of State. And Hunter, another assistant, has kept a grip on the payroll for almost two generations. Yet the Republicans declare that the Department of State will go to pieces unless these two antiquated specimens of senility are preserved through another administration.

In the War Department, which for four years has been ostensibly under the guiding hand of that mighty man Bob Lincoln there will be found a lot of venerable barnacles who have glided down to us from a former generation. and who found their way into position at a time when competency counted but little beside the potency of political influence. In this particular department, my mind reverts to an old fellow who has for his tenants something like a score of officials, one of whom is the chief of the division in which the old chap draws his regular rations of $1,800 per annum. His property at the Capital is worth hundreds of thousands of dollars, and many a poor devil is now waiting in vain to get some recompense far the sacrifices he has made to secure the ousting of just such old cormorants as this. He is only one of the hundreds other bloated bondholders and real estate speculators who live in Washington and figure upon the government pay-roll year in and year out through all administrations.

John Quincy Adams became a member of the lower House of Congress after having served a term as President of the United States, because, as he declared, the one position was equal in every way to the other. Now, however, we have Congressmen and reverend senators who are not only willing but anxious to serve their country in any possible or impossible capacity, so long as they can have their names retained upon the Government pay-roll. To-day some of the ex-members of the recently expired Congress are applicants for menial positions in the next Congress, just as the ex-members of a previous Congress have accepted service in this. Fifty of those members have got to be provided for, though why a defeated candidate for re-election should not suffer the consequences of his own unpopularity is unfathonable. PHONO.

—JUST SO! Seven out of ten you meet have a bad cold, and with coughing, hawking and snoring are kept busy. Do a good thing for yourself at once, by going to the nearest drug store and getting a bottle of Dr. Kessler's English Cough Medicine. If you are not satisfied that it is worth all your pay, the druggist will hand you back your money. Sold by J. Eisenhuth, Millheim, Pa.

The use of Iodoform or Mercurials in the treatment of catarrh—whether in the form of suppositories or ointments—should be avoided, as they are both injurious and dangerous. Iodoform is easy detected by its offensive odor. The only reliable catarrh remedy in the market today is Ely's Cream Balm, being free from all poisonous drugs. It has cured thousands of chronic and acute cases, where all other remedies have failed. A particle is applied into each nostril; no pain; agreeable to use. Price fifty cents; of druggists. 7-4t

A PAYING INVESTMENT.—At this season of the year, when your cows fail in milk, your horses become rough in coat, your pigs refuse to thrive, the hens won't lay as many eggs as they should, you will find a package or two of McDonald's Celebrated Tonic and Blood Purifyer Horse and Cattle Powders judiciously administered an investment that will pay dividends. They are positively the best Horse and Cattle Powders made. Dissatisfied buyers can have their money refunded. What other manufacturer dare make this offer.

—MCDONALD'S Improved Liver Pills are endorsed and perscribed by many eminent physicians. They do not make hair grow on bald heads or set broken bones, but they are the best corrector of a disordered liver yet discovered. Money refunded to dissatisfied purchasers.

Convinced.

Mr. U. G. King, foreman of the Leetonia Democrat, Leetonia, Ohio, writes: "DR. S. B. HARTMAN, Columbus, Ohio, Gentlemen: Some time since, I had occasion to doubt the genuineness of most of the articles that appear in different papers in regard to your wonderful PERUNA, and my curiosity was so great that I determined to write to one of the many people that claimed to have been cured by this medicine, and accordingly wrote to Mrs. J. W. Reynolds, of New Lisbon, this county, and received the following reply." "I received your letter this evening, and in reply would say that PERUNA, I believe, saved my life, and I can not recommend it too highly; for all complaints it is the best medicine in existence. It seems to help you as you swallow it. I would advise any one suffering from my complaint to take PERUNA and be convinced. Yours truly, Mrs. J. W. Reynolds." Now, that's her card, word for word, and as I am well acquainted with the lady, I do not believe she would lie. It is truly wonderful how your medicine does do good.

James L. Mooney, Prospect, Ohio, writes: "For the past ten years I have been sufferlng from constipation and dyspepsia, and all the evil effects that accompany them. I was treated by a number of doctors, all to no effect. I used several patent medicines, which did me no good, and about three years ago I was seized with a severe nervous trouble, and was obliged to quit farming. I thought my days would soon be over, but last winter I received one of your pamphlets called the "Ills of Life." I at once tried your PERUNA and MANALIN. They helped me right away. I used nine bottles of PERUNA and three of MANALIN; and now I am quite well, and able to resume farming. I also had a little child which was attacked with a severe cramp in the stomach; we thought it would go into spasms. I used nothing but PERUNA. We gave it an injection of PERUNA and warm water, and gave it a teaspoonful of the medicine internally every half hour. It was relieved in one hour, and has not been bothered since. I have also used it with as good effect in case of croup and colds. I know that it is a wonderful medicine, and recommend it to all who are in poor health. The above statement I am willing to swear to."

W. M. Plants, Deep Valley, Greene county, Pa., writes: "Please send me your book on the 'Ills of Life.' I have used one bottle of PERUNA, and am greatly benefited."

—FOR scrofula, erysipelas, tetter, salt rheum, skin diseases, humors, sores, eruptions, pimples, blotches, swellings, tumors, boils, ulcers, scald head, ringworm, hives, and all blood disorders, no remedy ever devised equals in efficacy and power McDonald's Great Blood Purifier or Sarsaparillian Alterative Warranted.

—On Monday Mr.C. A. Weaver took charge of the clerkship in J.W.Snook's store a position lately held by J. W. Stover.

—A child of a Mr. Yarnel, of Greenbrier station, Penn township died Monday and was buried on Tuesday afternoon.

—Our prices for printing letter heads, envelopes, billheads, statements, business cards, circulars, etc., are very low. Call and see us.

—Maud, a little daughter of Harvey Confer, has been confined to a bed of sickness for some time. Her condition is thought to be critical.

—The executors' notice of Wm. Weaver and A. D. Weaver, for Frederick Weaver's estate in Haines township, appears in another column.

—At no other place in the valley can you buy groceries at a better advantage than at G. A. Harter's grocery store, on Main street. And don't you forget it.

—George C. Breon's sale of personal property at Spring Mills will take place on Saturday, March 28th, 1885, after which he expects to move to Philadelphia.

—The communication of "H. J." came to hand, but too late for insertion in this week's paper. The matter will receive proper attention next week.

—The Millheim Skating Rink was visited by about one hundred persons last Saturday evening and our informant says that a very pleasant time was spent.

—Daniel B. Weaver, residing at the Cross Road, about one and a fourth mile north of Penn Hall, expects to make sale of his live stock and farm implements on Saturday, March 21st, 1885.

—Bellefonte has several applicants for the post-office at that place. All of them are good men of whom the best and most capable one should get the office.

—Mr. B. W. Shafer, of Miles township will make sale of his livestock and farming utensils, on his premises, near Wolfe's store, on Thursday, March 20th See posters.

—Mr. Coldren, the merchant tailor, has begun work in the room opposite Campbell's store on Main street and the indications are that he will do a prosperous business. Success.

NOTICE.—Having been appointed agent by the Buck Thorn Fence Co., for the sale of the celebrated Buck Thorn Steel Barbed Fencing, I invite persons wanting this handsome, lasting and cheap article to call on me.

J. B. FISHER,
10-3m. Penn Hall, Pa.

—We publish the financial report of the auditors for the borough of Millheim in this issue. Read it and convince yourselves that the affairs have been managed in a proper way.

—Pennsylvania State College Agricultural Bulletines in pamphlet form is on our table. Of special interest to farmers. Can be had upon application to the President of the institution.

—Those of our subscribers who will change residence on the first of April will please give us their new post office address. If such notice is given by letter the old address should be added.

—Master Frank Foote, one of the sons of J. D. Foote, deceased, is visiting his relatives in town. He lives with Mr. Levi Long, of near Madisonburg, and has grown to be quite a big boy.

—A careful look at the flitting article in another column will show that the population of Millheim is on the increase. Several families from other places have become residents of this borough.

—On Saturday, March 28th, at one o'clock, p. m., C. Alexander and A. R. Alexander, executors, will sell on the premises, corner Main and Penn street, Millheim, some valuable personal property. See Bills.

—Rev. Taylor Brown, the colored preacher, delivered a good sermon in the M. E. church last Tuesday evening and had a fair audience. He will preach in the above named church on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

MUSICAL COLLEGE.—The Musical College at Freeburgh, Pa., will open April 28th, for a course of study of vocal and instrumental music. For circular address, F. C. MEYER, 4t Freeburgh, Pa.

—Mr. Jacob Reed, on his return from Coburn one day last week, accompanied by a lady and gentleman, in turning out got too far to one side and the party was spilt on the pike. No damages resulted from the mishap.

—Rev. Shannon and family arrived in town on Wednesday morning. The Lutherans had the parsonage snugly prepared and a fine dinner cooked. A large number of the congregation helped the family to eat their first meal.—Sunbury Democrat.

—The report that Hon. J. P. Gephart was robbed of $50 in money while on his way to the inauguration is not correct. Mr. Gephart says that only a wallet containing several valuable papers was taken from him, some of which he recovered since.

AARONSBURG ACADEMY.—Spring Term opens Monday, April 20th. Superior advantages guaranteed to those having the profession of teaching in view. A liberal prtronage reepectfully solicited.

W. FRANK MUSSER.

—In yesterday's Patriot, giving the proceedings of the Methodist conferference at Huntingdon, Pa., we find that the new preacher for Penn's valley circuit will be Rev. Isaac Heckman, while Rev. Sarvis, the former pastor of this charge will go to the Clearfield circuit.

—C. Dinges, of the late firm of Dinges, Trumpfheller, & Co. will meet all parties having unsettled accounts with them at their former office this week until 9.30 o'clock on Saturday morning, and also on Friday, March 27th, after which all unsettled accounts will be placed for collection.

—Rev. C. F. Deininger, of New Berlin, was taken very sick, while at York, attending the Ev. conference. He was the guest of Mr. John Thomas, his son-in-law, at that place, and had a severe time of it. At this writing we are glad to hear that he is out of danger and on a fair way to recovery.

—The 10th anniversary copy of the Philadelphia Times, containing 26 pages, filled with interesting and entertaining reading matter, and enveloped in a tastefully printed title page is on our table. The publishers can justly feel proud of the progress they have made in journalism in the last ten years.

NOTICE. —The undersigned gives notice that she will teach a summer term of ten weeks in the Primary school room on Penn street, Millheim, commencing Monday May 1st. Terms $1.50 per pupil. Parents are respectfully asked to send their children.

CORA B. REIFSNYDER.

FARM FOR RENT.—The farm of George Breon, deceased, situate in Gregg township, about three miles south of Spring Mills, can be rented. It contains about 75 acres of cultivated land, with good water and an abundance of fruit on the premises. Come and see the property. At present occupied by PETER A. BREON.

NOTICE OF OPENING.—Mr. E. I. Coldren hereby respectfully informs the public that he is now prepared to do all kind of tailoring work from an overall to a fine suit or overcoat. He is a mechanic of many years' experience and guarantees satisfactory work. He has opened shop in Brown's building, opposite Campbell's store, Main street, where he will be glad to receive the patronage of the public. A line of samples constantly kept in stock.

—Mr. J D Long and Mr Wm Pealer, two of Spring Mills' merchants were in the JOURNAL office to see us on Saturday afternoon. Sorry we were not at home, gentlemen. Hope you may soon repeat your call, when we will try to be on hand.

—The Millheim Marble Works are turning out some very fine work. The yard is full to repletion of excellent monuments and headstones of beautiful and chaste design. Mr. A. C. Musser, the proprietor is an expert mechanic and a square man to deal with while his prices can not be undersold anywnere. 3t

NOTICE.—All persons using the Red Barn or any part of the ground or buildings, known as the Deshler and Jordan property on Penn street, Millheim, excepting the ice house of Roop and Reifsnyder, will please vacate on the first day of April 1885, otherwise the articles will be disposed of according to law.

D. I. BROWN.

CARD.—We feel ourselves much indebted to sisters Alice and Elizabeth Luse for their zealous care of our afflicted children during our absence from home, also to brothers Henry, Elias and Fremont Luse for looking after the wants of the family. Our Heavenly Father's choicest blessings are invoked upon them and also on Dr. Mingle for his assiduous professional attention and courtesy. C. W. RAVER and family.

A FAMILY REUNION.—John Peter Wetzel, of Conway, Iowa, who resided in the West since 1853, Reuben Wetzel, of James Port, Missouri, who moved West some fifteen years ago, and Harrison Wetzel, residing in Nittany Valley were the guests of their brother F. F. Wetzel on Wednesday last. On the day following the whole party left for New Berlin, to visit their aged mother, 80 years old, and had a pleasant reunion there, which on their return is likely to be repeated at F. F. Wetzel's place on North street some time next week.

—That old established cough remedy, Downs' Elixir, still more than holds its own in the public estimation, despite sharp and active competition. It is a 'home remedy,' and in this locality needs no words of praise from us, so well and favorably known is it. It is the standard remedy for coughs, colds and all throat troubles, with great numbers of our people, and their continued use and unsolicited recommendation of it speaks volumes in its favor.—Burlington, Vt., Free Press, January 26. 1882.

CLEVELAND OAK. —Mr. Adam Bartges recently felled an oak tree on his farm in Penn township which measured 5 feet and 6 inches across the stump and according to the number of rings was 283 years old. The log had to be split into quarters with powder before they could be sawed at Lamey's mill The tree produced 4540 feet of lumber at $10.00 per M, and 4 cords of wood (from the top) at $3.00 per cord, making a total gain of $57.40. Surely a valuable tree.

NOTICE. —The copartnership heretofore existing between Clevan Dinges and H. H. Trumpfheller and known as Dinges, Trumpfheller & Co. is this day disolved by mutal consent. The business will be continued under the firm name of Trumpfheller & Vonada. The books of the late firm will be left at their former office for settlement and all unsettled accounts after April 1st will be placed for collection.

CLEVAN DINGES,
H. H. TRUMPFHELLER.

Coburn, Pa., March 9th, 1885.

NAMING THE BABY.—An exceedingly interesting lecture on this subject will be delivered by the Rev. A. Carl Whitmer, A. M., in the Reformed church, Aaronsburg, on Thursday evening, March 26th, 1885 and in the M. E. church, Millheim, on Friday evening, March 27th.

In terse and eloquent style the lecturer will tell all about the babies' names, in ancient and modern times—names proper and improper, long and curious, fancy and absurd. The lecture will be instructive, humorous and entertaining. Are you puzzled to know what to name that baby, come and hear this lecture. You will be well entertained for an hour. It will be a treat for boys and girls. Grown people will greatly enjoy it. Come for good advice and a hearty laugh.

The proceeds, at Aaronsburg are for the Ladies Mite Society; at Millheim, for the Reformed Church Aid Society. Doors open at 7 p. m. Lecture to begin at 7.30 p. m. Admission 25 cts, Children, 15 cts.

—The two concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings, winding up the musical convention at Coburn were a success both as to performance and large audiences. On Saturday evening especially the church was packed with people, many of them having come a considerable distance. The programme on both occasions was well selected and creditably rendered. The choruses sung by a class of nearly a hundred singers and ably directed by Mr. Kleckner, were very good and were interspersed by suitable quartettes and solos. Prof. Lowell Meyer's unequaled songs added considerable spice to the exercises and never failed to pleasantly entertain his attentive hearers. The good people of Coburn as well as those who had come from other places seemed to enjoy themselves very much and the week of song will ever be remembered with pleasure by those who were there. The convention resulted in the snug snm of $45.00 net proceeds.

THE FLITTINGS.—The following changes of residence will take place in town on the first of April: Commencing at the eastern end of Main street: Felty Breon will move to Wolfe's Store Brushvalley and Harvey Hauck will move into the house vacated by Breon. J. W. Lose will reside with his father and A. J. Grove takes J. W. Lose's place. Mrs. A. J. Albright, moves into her own house with C. W. Albright. Mr. Fetterolf will move into the house formerly occupied by Mrs. Albright. Miss Elizabeth Reighard will take lodgings in Adolph Miller's house at present occupied by Harvey Lamey, who moves to his parents on Penn street until his own house on Water street is finished. W. J. Springer moves into his own house on North street and J. W. Stover having bought Springer's house on Main Street will take possession of the same. P. H. Musser will move into Henry Brown's house and David Brown will move into Deshler's property on Penn street and Sam. Clark will go in where Brown vacates. H.H. Weiser will take possesion of the house lately purchased from Geo. W. Shunk. Nicholas Barnhart goes into the house vacated by David Miller on North street, and Mr. Miller goes in where Barnhart vacates. Lewis Snook goes into Michael Ulrich's house (late Moore property). Rev. Deininger expect to move to his own house on the hill. Mill house on Penn street Mr. Roop, from Linden Hall. Noah Stover takes possession of his own house on Penn street, at present occupied by Rev. Raver, who moves into J. G. Musser's house on North street. Michael Maize goes into Spigelmyer's house on Water street. J. Spigelmyer will move to Alexander's property. Henry Fiedler moves into the house he lately bought and Dr. Hafer will leave for Bellefonte. J. D. Lose expects to build on Penn street, opposite Kerstetter's.

Harvey Swartz will move into J. H. Reifsnyder's house on North street, and Charles McCoy into Lydia Musser's, and Robert Miller moves in where Mr. McCoy vacates. Wm. Derr goes into Andy Immel's house, Spring Bank. Ed Roop into Mrs. Armbruster's house, Jesse Wirt takes possession of his new house on the hill on North street, John Hoover moves into Ream's house, George Royer into Wm. L. Musser's house on Penn street. Ross Mowery will move where George Royer vacates. Dan. Garey moves into Lamey and Knarr's house. Mrs. Hannah Miller will take possession of her own property and Mr. Eisenhower expects to reside with her.

Nerhud moves into Charley Frankenberger's house (formerly Mowery's property). George Rhymestine's house will be occupied by Mr. Shreckengast, from Sugar valley.

Several parties who expect to move have been ommitted in this article because we could not ascertain their future places of residence. Will give further reports later.

—Deininger's Ready Reference Tax Receipt Book is growing in public favor. Customers from a distance are beginning to call for it. It is an admitted necessity for every tax-payer who does his business in a practical manner. It it arranged to last for ten years and sells at the low price of 40 cents. Call and see it at the JOURNAL Store. tf

Coburn Briefs.

Our convention last week was a success. The gross receipts amounted to $85. Lowell Meyer, of Centre Hall and the editor of the Millheim Journal assisted materially at our convention.

Postmaster Grenninger buried his little son Effey on Monday. He was four years old and a very bright child. His disease was pneumenia. Thus can each one be called from life.

Trumpfheller & Vonada are the men who succeed Dinges, Trumpfheller & Co, in the store business and we predict success to them.

The dam here is still frozen over with heavy ice and the thermometer below zero this morning.

C. Dinges is no longer one of our residents, having returned to Centre Hall to locate there permanently. We hope to have occasional visits from him.

Constable Ard is quite busy attending to the duties of his office and Bob Vonada is re-arranging the new store.

We hear of a remonstrance against liquor license in our little burg. Evidently the fruits of the recent temperance lecture. Z.

Madisonburg News.

The weather around here is extremely cold for this time of the year.

On Tuesday the 17th, Fred Schlegle moved to Penn Hall to farm for Major Fisher. By his departure Madisonburg has lost a good and useful citizen.

Benjamin Smeltzer from the West is visiting friends in and around town.

Babes in the woods were in town this week, exhibiting in the town hall on Tuesday evening. The turn out was rather small.

Mr. John Hoy, Sr., residing one mile west of town is at present on the sick list. He is the oldest man in Brush valley—having been 91 years old last December.

Mr. L. Bierly, the teacher of our grammar school in town expects to teach a subscription school here this summer.

Mr. Glaunce, of Sugar Valley, near Boonville moved on Tuesday to the old Zeigler property, two miles west of town. Mr. G. purchased said property some time ago.

Will try and write more next week.

Maternal Ignorance.

During one of Elizabeth Cady Stanton's lecturing tours she had occasion to visit Mt. Vernon, Iowa, which point she reached late one very cold Sunday night. As the train rolled off she found herself alone in the darkness, the depot deserted and locked against all travelers. To stay there was to freeze, to go somewhere else was to fall into some ditch or trap she knew not of. Thinking perhaps some one might be asleep inside, she began to pound upon the doors and windows. Receiving no answer her only resource was to scream. So she shouted 'Hallo! Hallo!' loud and long. Just as she began to despair of being heard, the sound of footsteps gladdened her heart, and soon a strong young man appeared. He was the telegraph operator, and lived half way between the town and the depot. As Mrs. Stanton was advertised to speak there she did not need much of an introduction. The young man readily understood the situation, and taking a key out of his pocket said: 'Will you sit in the depot until I go up to the town and get a sleigh, or would you prefer to walk?' Shivering with cold and fearing to stay alone, she chose the latter. It was slow work, as the snow was deep and the wind was strong. Her companion lightened her discomforts, however, by describing his life in the army, battles, prisons, hospitals, care of the sick, etc., which led to the following:

'One year ago I married a pretty Southern girl, and now we have a baby a month old, and, poor little thing, it cries all the time, and we feel so sorry for it that sometimes we all cry together. Do you know anything about babies?' said he, stopping suddenly, as if propounding a most momentous question.

'Yes,' said I, 'I know all about them. I have read all the authorities, from Dr. Andrew Combe down to Mrs. Winslow's soothing syrup, and I have made a practical application of my knowledge on seven of my own children.'

Inspired with confidence in my wonderful attainments in this department of knowledge, he said: 'If I should bring a sleigh to-morrow morning, would you go and see my wife and baby and tell us what to do?'

I replied: 'I shoud be happy to show my gratitude to you for all your kindness by doing something for your wife and baby in return.'

Accordingly, the next morning we drove to his home. I found a sweet-looking, pale young mother, weary and worn with the care of a child that seemed to be in great suffering, wriggling and twisting like an eel. She said it never seemed at ease day or night. Taking it in my arms I soon saw that it was bandaged as tight as a drum from its arms to its hips. I took every pin out, leaving all the clothing loose, rubbed its little back and breast gently, and laid it out on an even surface on the bed, at peace, where it slept quietly all the time I remained, and, as the father told me the next day, long after, the first comfortable nap the poor little soul had since it was born.

I sat a long time, telling the young mother how to take care of herself and her baby, and the reason for all my directions. I have asked many mothers why they bandaged their children, and they never yet heard one good reason. To show how ignorant they are, one told me her nurse said a baby must be bandaged, as it would be in danger of falling apart if not tightly pinned together. I replied that it was rather remarkable that kittens and puppies should have been made so as to hold together and the human family left wholly at the mercy of a bandage.

The next day at Cedar Rapids I was relating my Mt. Vernon experience to one of my sons, when I remembered that I had not told the young mother to give her baby water every day. 'Now,' said I, 'that poor baby will suffer with thirst. They will give the dog and cat and canary bird water, but they will never think of the baby.' So I wrote a telegram, 'Give the baby water six times a day,' and hurried my son off to dispatch it.

When he returned he said: 'The operator laughed so immoderately he could hardly send the message, and I joined in the chorus.'

'Well,' said I, 'you may laugh, but that is one of the most important messages ever sent over the wires for the future peace and happiness of the race.'

Making the same trip years after, I met the young man and inquired about the baby.

'Hale and hearty, and has had water six times a day,' he answered.

'Then you received my telegram?' said I.

'Oh, yes,' he replied. 'It was published in the papers, and I received it from every point of the compass for months afterward. When the operators at the various stations had nothing else to do they used to send me that telegram. So the water was never forgotten.'

'I have often told mothers wrestling with their children if, instead of shaking and scolding the poor things, they would give them water to drink and a sponge bath, they would save themselves much trouble and their children much suffering. But they all have an insane prejudice against water. They will give them tea and coffee, all kinds of mints, but never water. We have too few intelligent mothers, such as are ready to meet the usual emergencies, which sooner or later must be had in the experience of every mother.'

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle.

Only Hairpins.

'Humph!' he called, as he cut through his buckwheat cake and dropped knife and fork.

'What's the matter?' asked the landlady.

'Adulterated!'

'What with?'

'Hairpins!'

'Oh! is that all? When you first spoke I didn't know but the cook had been using some of the extra fine flour along with the buckwheat, though I expressly forbade her doing so.'—Detroit Free Press.

Many physicians assert that the secret of long life after threescore years and ten is to keep warm.

Mrs. Grant always calls the general 'Hiram.' That is his name. By a clerical error he acquired the name of 'Ulysses' at West Point.

D. F. James of San Francisco, owns a remarkably small dog. It weighs less than one and a half pounds. It is perfect in form and is quite intelligent.

'How far is it to Cork?' asked a weary footman. 'Seven miles,' was the reply. 'Whom do you wish to see there?' 'Faith, it's meself I'd loike to see there.'

The Printers' Bible, issued before 1702, contained an absurd misstatement of David in the 110th Psalm v, 161 in which he was pathetically made to say that 'printers persecuted him without a cause,' instead of princes.

A string of fine snipe hung outside the kitchen door of a Chico Valley [Cal.] sportsman. A cat tried to reach them but could not. She went away, but soon returned with another cat, and, standing upon his shoulders, they were soon enjoying a genuine game dinner.

The history of Boston women begins with a young girl, Ann by name, ten years old, who was the first person to leap from the boat which brought over the exploring party from Charleston in 1630; and when, as Mrs. Pollard, she died in 1725, aged 105 there was left behind her a canvas, still in existence in the gallery of the Historical Society, in which the strong, hard lines of the old face indicate a toughness which could well have borne the hardships of the early settlement.

PRICE. No. 1 for family of 6..... $8
No. 2 for large family..... 9
No. 3 for Hotel and Laundry,.... 10

Over 20,000 in use.

Thousands of ladies are using it, and they speak of it in the highest terms, saying that they would rather dispense with any other household article, than this excellent Washer. No well-regulated family will be without it, as it saves the clothes, saves labor, saves time, saves fuel, saves soap, and makes washday no longer a dread, but rather a pleasant recreation, as much as such is possible.

is not incurable, if properly attended to.—At its commencement it is but a slight irritation of the membrane which covers the Lungs; then an inflamation, when the cough is rather dry, local fever, and the pulse more frequent, the cheeks flushed and chills more common. This Elixir in curing the above complaints, operates so as to remove all morbid irritations and inflamation from the lungs to the surface, and finally expel them from the system. It facilitates expectoration.

It heals the ulcerated surfaces and relieves the cough and makes the breathing easy. It supports the strength and at the same time reduces the fever. It is free from strong opiate and astringent articles, which are of so drying a nature as to be in great danger of destroying the patient; whereas this medicine never dries or stops the cough, but, by removing the cause, consequently, when the cough is cured the patient is well. DR. JOHN BULL'S

Smith's Tonic Syrup
FEVER and AGUE
Or CHILLS and FEVER,
AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

BULL'S SARSAPARILLA is the old and reliable remedy for impurities of the blood and Scrofulous affections—the King of Blood Purifiers.

DR. JOHN BULL'S VEGETABLE WORM DESTROYER is prepared in the form of candy drops, attractive to the sight and pleasant to the taste.
